SUMMARY.

The battle continues violently along the whole 40-mile front between the Oise and the Ancre.

The French occupy the whole of the crest of Lassigny Massif.

They repulsed a counter-attack on the Massif after stubborn fighting.

Though the French hold the crest, the Germans are still holding out on the north-eastern spur.

Despite strong resistance, the French made progress north-east of Gury.

They gained a footing in Plessier-de-Roye Park, and reached Belval.

It is considered inevitable that the German line north of Lassigny ridge will fall back, in which case Roye will become untenable.

The French brought up their guns much quicker than was anticipated, and Noyon will be under fire immediately.

Chaulnes may be held by the enemy a day or two longer, but its evacuation cannot long be postponed.

The enemy is apparently preparing for a further retirement. He is burning villages between Peronne and Chaulnes.

The maximum depth of the Allied infantry's penetration is 13 miles, the average depth being between nine and ten miles.

The Crown Prince and Prince Rupprecht are draining their lines elsewhere in order to obtain reinforcements.

The French First Army and the British Fourth Army have captured over 28,000 prisoners, including 800 officers.

They also took 600 guns, including many heavy pieces, besides several thousand machine-guns.

Three complete trains were also captured, as well as vast stocks of stores.

Since the beginning of July 75,000 prisoners have been taken by the Allies on the Western front.

There is much air-fighting. Peronne and Cambrai railway stations are being heavily assailed.

The internal situation in Germany is reported to be one of great depression.

A violent cannonade was heard at Skagen on Monday morning, coming from the direction of the Skagerrack.

Several vessels were seen travelling northwards at full speed.

Information has reached Ottawa that the Allies' campaign in Northern Russia has opened successfully.

The population is greeting the Allies with enthusiasm. The Bolsheviks scarcely offered resistance.

Great quantities of rolling stock and many batteries have been captured.

The Bolsheviks are doing their utmost to overwhelm the Czecho-Slovaks before Allied aid can reach them.

There are great German and Finnish military preparations on the Norwegian frontier.

Germany is reported to have sent Landsturm troops from Flanders to Russia.

The "Voessische Zeitung" frankly admits that the Brest Litovak treaty is a dead-letter.

The situation, it says, is drifting towards a renewal of the war.

The Germans, it is reported, intend to occupy Petrograd, and are despatching troops.

A declaration has been issued that Britain regards the Czecho-Slovaks as an Allied nation.

An important conference on Russian affairs is being held at the German headquarters.

Several thousand armed Ukrainian peasants are resisting German attempts to seize the harvests.

Sanguinary engagements are proceeding. Fresh German troops have been sent to suppress the beginning of a revolution.

Speaking at Temora, the Premier said the Labour party had deliberately associated itself with disloyalty and disorder.

Mr. James Kell, the acting-governor of the Commonwealth Bank, says he has no doubt of the success of the Seventh War Loan.

The terms of the loan have been received favourably on the Stock Exchange, the chairman of which has no question of its success.

Ninety-one men were accepted at the Central Recruiting Depot on Tuesday.

Sister Blanche Cresswick and Sister Elsie Claire Pidcock have been awarded the Royal Red Cross.

The South Coast March to Freedom column was welcomed at Nowra yesterday.

So far the column has covered 300 miles, and 75 recruits have been obtained.

The column from Tocumwal reached Bowral on Tuesday, and was accorded an enthusiastic reception.

Going evidence before the Public Service Commissioner, a witness urged that attention should be directed to making temporary employees permanent.

It was stated that one officer, who was for 22 years a temporary employee, died while waiting for permanent rank.

A tram passenger was fined 1/ yesterday as a warning to the public not to throw tram tickets on the footpaths.

The magistrate remarked that notice should have been given that used tram tickets must be placed in the receptacles provided.

A special committee is being enrolled for the administrative control of "Homes Day," to be inaugurated on Monday.

At yesterday's meeting of the Red Cross committee Mrs. Gordon Wesche, who has returned from England, described the war work of women as wonderful.

Mr. Justice Higgins has reserved judgment in the appeal by the Engineers' Society in reference to piecework and dilution in shipbuilding.

A new chapel at Long Bay Prison, built by the prisoners for the use of all denominations, was opened by Archbishop Wright yesterday.

The Deputy Prices Commissioner held an inquiry yesterday into the prices of roofing tiles.

The Commissioner agreed to visit the factories before making any recommendation.

The wages of employees in soap and candle works are to be increased.

The resolutions carried at the Shires Conference were placed before the Minister for Local Government yesterday.

The Minister accepted a proposal making it compulsory for adjoining shires to destroy noxious weeds within a mile from their boundaries.

A number of meat-canning factories closed down owing to the scarcity of large supplies. Over 800 hands are idle.

The Assembly last night considered the bill to enlarge the powers of Supreme Court Judges sitting as Royal Commissioners.

Mr. J. Storey attempted to secure an amendment so as to take in the whole circumstances of the I.W.W. trials.

The Minister held that the scope of the Commission must be governed by the evidence already submitted.

He said that as soon as fresh evidence was adduced the scope of the inquiry would be widened.

Judge Curlewis made some pointed remarks yesterday in regard to methods employed to coerce men into joining trade unions.

The Labour leagues are making a determined effort to capture the city elections in December.

They will, however, have to fight the organisation of the Nationalist Association.

The shortage of meat is causing an unprecedented demand for both eggs and bacon. Full rates are asked.

The market was bare of butter yesterday, but fresh supplies are expected to-day.

Another shipment of potatoes arrived from Tasmania, but there was no movement in prices.

Investment scrip changed hands freely on the Stock Exchange yesterday. War Loan was again lower, but industrial stocks were firm.

All lines of manufactured metals were in demand yesterday.

Forecast.—Cloudy with some scattered showers, chiefly along the north coast; otherwise fine, with mild day temperatures, and cold, frosty, foggy night; south-west to south-east winds, squally on the north coast.

FARMER'S,
SYDNEY, 1860-1918. Seventy-eight Years. THE HOUSE OF DISTINCTION.

A POPULAR FUNCTION
IS FARMER'S THEATRE DINNER,
Friday Evenings, 6.30 to 8.30 o'clock.

SMART READY-TO-WEARS THAT KEEP STRICTLY TO THE VOGUE OF STRAW.

Examples of Farmer's becoming Ready-to-wear styles now showing.
The Millinery designer's clever imagination and deft fingers have here evolved Hats uniquely new in effects. The foundation of the smart effects are unquestionably the artistic shapes, but in the trimming realm the designer is evidently restricted, for on each Hat ribbon plays the major role. Expressing of the original ideas, however, in fancy free, for throughout the Millinery Salon the thought occurs to one: "How prominent ribbon is, but how delightfully varied are its uses."

Scores of fresh Ready-to-wear ideas, of which the following few are but a tithe, await the visitor to-day.

NOTE THAT PRICES OF THESE STYLISH HATS ARE SPECIALLY KEEN.

AN UNUSUAL TYPE OF READY-TO-WEAR IN WHITE TAGEL STRAW, also in Putty colour, with an inflated crown. Tie smart trimming is a twisted ribbon to match the straw, the ends being drawn in cute manner across the brim, which is narrowed in front and rolled slightly at side. PRICE .....
AN ATTRACTIVE HAT OF NATTIER COARSE STRAW, with a medium crown, prettily trimmed Saxe Blue faille band, pleated into a fan at front. A drooping brim is finished similar coloured ribbon. PRICE ..... 17/6.
BECOMING SAILOR SHAPE OF NAVY PEDAL STRAW, a sloping crown trimmed with fancy band of fine corded ribbon to match, the brim bound with similar material. PRICE ..... 21/.
TWO ROWS OF OTTOMAN SILK AND A DAINTY HAND-MADE POSEY form the trimming of this smart Sailor in Black Leghorn Straw. The crown is quite plain and the brim smartly upturned. PRICE 25/6.

NEW SEASON'S POSIES AND FRUIT TRIMMINGS.

Large assortments of the newest ideas in Hat Posies, also in Fruit Trimmings for new season's Hats are now displayed. The woman who prefers to trim her own Hats will find untold possibilities in this section of the Millinery Salon. Several dainty trimmings are quoted, all moderate in price.
DAINTY BUNCH OF GRAPES, with foliage, suitable for adorning smart Millinery. In all the latest tones. PRICE 1/
PRETTY FRENCH SPRAY OF FOREST-NOTE AND BANKSIA ROSEBUDS, a very dainty trimming. PRICE 1/3
ANOTHER ATTRACTIVE ROSEBUD POSEY of Pink Silk and Chiffon, suitable for either Millinery or Dress decoration. PRICE, 2/6.
BUNCHES OF DAISIES for children's Millinery, in Pale Pink, Sky, and White. PRICE 1/6
Millinery Salon, Third Floor, Pitt-street.

SOW BROAD BEANS AND PEAS
FOR DOMESTIC USE.
The question of "The Cost of Living" is always one of interest, and there are a very large number of people who could turn even a small piece of ground to good use by GROWING SOMETHING for HOME CONSUMPTION.
Beans and Peas are always acceptable, and their cultivation is not difficult. The Gardener, therefore, has a chance of showing what he can do to reduce the "Cost of Living."

SNOW'S NEEDLEWORK NEWS.

"Here the needle piles its busy task,
The pattern grows, the well-depicted flower
Unfolds its leaves and spring."—Cowper.

There you have a picture of the skilful needleworker, plying an Art in which ALMOST ALL WOMEN EXCEL.

And it will be good news, for needleworkers that Snow's have enlarged their Needlework Section, given it greater space, more display room, and are carrying larger stocks of all Needlework accessories, and garments traced for working.

Be sure to inspect the Needlework Section on the Ground Floor when next you visit Snow's Stores. You will find just what YOU NEED, AT JUST THE PRICES YOU WANT.

MARK FOY'S, LIMITED.

FOY'S FAIR,
FOY'S FAIR,
THE GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR THRIFT AND ECONOMY.

The busy hum of the Fair continues almost without cessation day by day.

Our advice to the Public to "save while save you can" has certainly been followed very literally.

And in these departments where Fashion is not "the changeling of a day," wise and prudent people can enjoy the reflection that their needs have been met at Foy's for months to come, and that they are through anticipating their wants.

The crowded counters in the

DRESS FABRICS SECTION AT FOY'S FAIR

bear witness to the appreciation of the Fair's Reductions.

Some of the Bargains here are eye-openers, especially in view of the fact that many of the "rarest" lines will be as scarce as sovereigns as the war goes on.

You can't go wrong in buying Dress Fabrics at the Fair to-day. The savings are considerable in

DRESS LENGTHS, BLOUSE LENGTHS,
SKIRT LENGTHS, REMNANTS,
SILKS, SATINS, VELVETEENS.

But, as previously stated, costumiers are not necessary where the whole of our dependable Merchandise, irrespective of War's conditions, come under the pruning influence of

THE FAIR'S REDUCED PRICES.

Take stock of your wants once again, and invest your spare cash at the Fair.

THE FAIR'S THE THING.

MARK FOY'S, LIMITED.

How Long Life is Built into BUZACOTT GATES

First the designs executed by experts, combining the skill of the draughtsman with our years of experience in gate manufacturing.

The strongest steel tubing, braced by our special process and given added strength by the addition of cabled wires.

Finally a modern factory where these operations are carried out with the utmost efficiency.

That's the right way to think of BUZACOTT GATES, and when you think of them as Gates that do not sag, that swing lightly, that are unaffected by the weather and White Ants, you realise their great value.

These are the qualities that have made Buzacott Gates the most popular—and which are keeping them in the fore to-day.

All the Old Favourites are still being manufactured,

Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery

For COUGHS and COLDS

MISS LIZETTE PARKES (from a photo.)

Our friends are our best advertisement, for it is those who have used Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery who know its value. Noted singers, actresses, soldiers, and prominent citizens from all over Australia have testified to the value of this famous cough remedy. Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery is just as necessary in the home as in the trenches. New Discovery will banish all colds, from father's bronchitis down to baby's croupy cough, so take two bottles home to-night—one for home use, the other for your soldier boy.

Two Sydney Favourites:
MISS LIZETTE PARKES
AND
DR. SHELDON'S NEW DISCOVERY!

"I am writing to tell you what a strong advocate I am of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery. It is the only thing that does me any good when I have a cold or cough, or when my throat feels sore or strained. During the past two years I have proved it on numerous occasions, and always with the best results. It is an excellent remedy, and I never feel safe to start on a trip without having a bottle of it in my bag. With very best wishes for New Discovery, I am, Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) LIZETTE PARKES."

First at the Front & First at Home

Our brave boys have enough suffering and danger to endure in the trenches without letting them run unnecessary risks of colds, perhaps ending in serious throat and chest troubles. We all know what boys are, and how neglectful they are if mother is not there to keep them up to the mark, so protect your boys by sending them a bottle of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery, the prompt and effective cold-banisher. They will be delighted at your thoughtfulness, and take it to please you at first, and, finding that it banishes the cold and eases the throat so quickly, later they will fly to it for relief at the first sign of a cold.

A neglected cough or cold may lead to serious bronchial or lung troubles. Don't take chances, for Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery for Coughs and Colds affords perfect security from serious effects of a cold. Small dose. Pleasant to take.

A GALLANT ANZAC PRAISES DR. SHELDON'S NEW DISCOVERY.

"I think every soldier should take a bottle of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery with him to the Front, for it saved me from the torture of a sore throat and colds all through my experience, for I made it a habit of taking a dose of the Mixture two or three times a week. This strengthened my throat and lungs, and prevented coughs and colds, from which most of my comrades suffered severely, both during our stay in Egypt and on the Peninsula.

"All the boys speak most highly of it, and it gives me much pleasure to add my testimony to that of my many pals who have likewise found New Discovery so beneficial.—Yours truly, (Sgd.) ROY CLARK."

Stops Coughs—Banishes Colds

Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery is the finest Cough Remedy you can buy. It is just as necessary in the home as in the trenches. New Discovery will banish all colds, from father's bronchitis down to baby's croupy cough, so take two bottles home to-night—one for home use, the other for your soldier boy. Price, 1/6 and 3/-

CHAPTER XXII.
MR. PHIN GETS BUSY.

Mr. Phin was beginning to get busy; at least, that is the way he expressed it, referring to a morning which had been crammed full of interviews, note-takings, and conversations at the 'phone.

Now—2.35, to be precise—he was in the private room of Silverest and Son, having a word with Mr. Arnold, with whom he appeared to be on pretty good terms.

"Come, come," he was saying, "you must stave them off for a little longer, and all will be well."

Mr. Arnold wagged his white head. "It's the end, Mr. Phin," he sighed. "Two letters this morning. . . . To think that such abominable letters should ever have been written to Silverest and Son! In a way, I was thankful for Mr. Silverest's absence, I think they would have about killed him. And yet his going away at this time seems to have brought down the storm. This morning a person actually hinted his opinion that Mr. Silverest was deliberately keeping out of the way. . . . Mr. Phin," the old man went on impressively, "I'm more convinced than ever that there is a leakage. Things in this office are being given away ——"

Mr. Phin was looking out of the window.

"By the way," he remarked, "haven't you a clerk named Loring here?"

"Yes. What of him?"

"Kindly ask him to step in here."

"God!—you don't mean ——"

"Pray be calm. Ring the bell for him." With a shaking hand Arnold struck the old-fashioned bell twice.

There was silence till a tall, fair, smart-looking young man came in. At a sign from Arnold he closed the door.

Without preface Mr. Phin said ——

"Mr. Loring, what do you intend to do with the ten-pound note in the upper left-side pocket of your waistcoat?"

A bullet could scarcely have had a greater effect physically on Mr. Loring. Yet he managed to stammer—"What the deuce has that to do with you?"

"Perhaps not so much as with Mr. Mandrake."

The young man moved backwards till he found the support of the door.

"Now, listen, Mr. Loring." Mr. Phin's voice was cold, yet held a suspicion of regret. "How would a certain high-minded girl take it were she to learn where all those little dinners and theatres had come from? . . . That's all. Go back to your work, and, remember, you can do nothing without being found out—nothing. Another communication of any sort with Mandrake, and you ask for your own doom. You will remain with Silverest and Son until you are given leave to resign. You may go."

The sorry object having departed, Mr. Phin turned to the clerk.

"He is safer here for the present, Mr. Arnold. Better make up your mind to that. I hope the leakage is stopped now. Keep up your heart. Good-bye. I'll find my way out."

He returned to his own office, running most of the way. His young man, Davison, was waiting in the sanctum.

"Glade's back, sir," he intimated. "Arrived King's Cross, 11.18. Train four hours late. Looked seedy and nervous, but sometimes smiled to himself. Had something important in breast-pocket. Went straight to office. Remained till nearly 1. Then to lunch at the Friars with Mandrake. Came out together at 2.15. Mandrake advised Glade to go right home and sleep it off, then dine with him. Glade went. Sherwood's looking after him now."

"Right," said Mr. Phin cheerfully. "Go and sleep it off yourself, Davison. You hadn't much rest last night. Don't report till the morning—unless you hear from me."

Mr. Phin made an entry in a big book labelled "Diary," and took up his pipe. But he laid it down next moment, for the telephone purred.

"Mr. Phin?"

"Go on, Bax."

"Styles left office, 2.10. More feverish-looking than ever. Overcoat buttoned. Hand frequently at breast. Went to Midland Bank. Cashed own cheque—couldn't see the amount—but good big sum, notes and gold. Went on to Green Star Line offices in Leadenhall-street. Ten minutes inside. Now in saloon bar, Nelson pub, same street. I'm speaking from there. Shall I give him card?"

"No. Likely to be there long?"

"Past experience says half-an-hour."

"All right. I'm sending Phillips to join you. One of you let me know when he goes back to the office. That's all."

Mr. Phin rang a bell numbered 5, and a minute later Phillips was on his way.

"Young man to see you, sir."

"Show him in."

The office-boy, an imperturbable youngster, opened the door for Yates Mandrake and Glade's second clerk. Mr. Phin pointed to a seat. The kindliness had vanished from his eyes.

The visitor collapsed upon the chair. He was obviously excited.

"Couldn't get away sooner. Big news," he gasped.

"Be calm."

Mr. Yates had not the crisp method of telling a story which was part of the training of Mr. Phin's young men. He rambled, and therefore his news is here condensed.

He had witnessed Styles skilfully open a sealed packet, bearing nothing on the outside save the initials, written large, D.B., extract the contents, weep over them, place them in his pocket, fill the packet to its original bulk with blank sheets of paper, re-seal it, sift a little dust over the wax, and place it under some documents on Mr. Mandrake's desk. The operation had occupied nearly an hour. Yates had then slipped to the outer door, opened and closed it, and sung out that he was back. But he had run a fearful risk, and was of the opinion that Mr. Phin was not paying him a penny too much. He honestly thought he was worth—

"One moment," Mr. Phin interrupted.

He wrote two words on a sheet of paper, folded it neatly, directed it, and took it to the outer office. Immediately thereafter a messenger went speeding to the Nelson public-house in Leadenhall-street. The note was addressed to Mr. Bax, and the two words were:—

"Bar him."

In his sanctum again, Mr. Phin requested his informant to proceed.

The latter had little more to tell. Styles had come to his own desk, written a note or two, and donned his coat and hat.

He handed Yates one of the notes, saying: "Give that to Mr. Mandrake. It's just to tell him I'm feeling unwell and going home to bed. Expect to be all right in the morning." He had then gone out.

There was a silence till Mr. Phin took a cash box from his drawer, and counted out six notes.

"Thirty pounds. Kindly sign this, Mr. Yates," said Mr. Phin, presenting a neatly printed and stamped form, to which he added the amount and date. It read—

"Received the sum of thirty pounds sterling for services rendered to date."

Yates signed, took the money, and with a murmur of thanks, passed out.

Mr. Phin lay back in his chair with a sigh.

"Dirty!" he muttered. "And it seems too good to be true."

About this time Mandrake, having made his call upon Hartleys, reached his office, and found Styles's note. The contents did not displease him; and he wished his wretched clerk a long illness and a slow recovery. Later, in going through the papers on his desk, he came upon the packet.

"Careless of me. Too much to think of," he reflected, with a sudden feeling of nerve weariness, and put the worthless thing in his safe.

Styles, on the other hand, seemed to have lost much of his nervousness. His step was almost jaunty as he emerged from the Nelson. Somebody's cab was waiting at the door. He had several purchases to make before going home to pack up, and now he paused to consider where he should begin.

A firm grip fell on each of his arms, and a voice spoke in his ear—

"Get into that cab, and quietly for your health's sake."

And there and then all the strength went from him. They bundled him in. The cab started.

* * * * * *

While Mandrake and Glade were dining at the flat that evening the former was called to the telephone.

"Is that Mr. Mandrake?"

"Yes. Who are you?"

"Friend of your Mr. Styles—name of Phillips. Mr. Styles is pretty seedy, Mr. Mandrake. Doctor has just seen him, and wants him to remain in bed. Can you let him have three or four days' leave? He is very unwilling to ask for it, but——"

"By all means Mr.—er—Phillips. Tell Styles not to worry. We shall get along at the office. He can let me know how he feels in a day or two."

"Best thanks. Your kind message will relieve his mind. If he can't do so himself, I'll ring you up in a couple of days. Good-bye."

(To be continued.)

FINE AND IMPRISONMENT.

Convicted at the Central Police Court yesterday of selling liquor without a license, in Charles-lane, Woolloomooloo, Paul Dunn, labourer, was fined £100, in default, nine months' imprisonment; and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. Mr. Macfarlane, S.M., said that Dunn had two previous convictions against him—the second in January last.

WOMEN'S COLUMN.

PENELOPE'S NOTES.

MUSHROOMS.

Most of our fruiterers' windows are this week made attractive with baskets and plates of fresh-looking mushrooms. Surely seldom were spring flowers more welcome to many of us than these small growths of the wayside that have been in so many cases gathered from the open, or what one may call, "no man's land." They could scarcely have put in their appearance at a more opportune moment. Here we are, with our meat in a precarious condition; our butter supply sharply restricted; eggs in the keenest demand; bacon and ham being as it were scrambled for, and fish being bought almost as it is taken from the nets, and those delicate foodstuffs appear scattered about many parts of our country-side as if a hand were shaking down crumbs for our gathering up. Although some of us fear them for food, others confess to so great a "weakness" for them, that they are afraid to so much as taste a stew in which a few of them have been introduced for flavouring purposes. Since they are bound to be very widely used in the immediate future (and to-day) let Penelope discourse briefly about the mushroom and its poisonous first cousin called by most of us by the ugly name of toadstool.

Firstly, only those absolutely familiar with these two mushroom growths should ever preside over the cooking of them. The edible mushroom is compact and brittle. If a portion of it be cut or broken off it does not change colour, and the odour of it is quite agreeable, whereas the poisonous variety has an unpleasant odour and a milky juice, is tough and rough to the touch, and if cut it will change its colour, becoming bluish, brown, green, and other queer shades. A little careful study and discrimination will soon enable anyone to become a competent judge in this matter. But, quite apart from the necessity of being careful as one may say, to separate the chaff from the wheat, one also needs to have a keen eye in overlooking all mushrooms intended to be used as food. Many of them that appear at first glance to be all one could desire, are, upon inspection, found to be full of tiny insects.

Some people regard mushrooms as only valuable for their flavouring properties. They are delicious "(think they) appetisers if you will, but that is their only virtue. As a matter of fact, they have distinct nourishing properties also. Let us be as exact as we can. "They contain 10 per cent. of solid matter; one-half of this is flesh-forming or nitrogenous substances. The ash is particularly rich in the most valuable salt in dietetics, phosphate of potassium"—said that important authority, "The Lancet," a few years ago, when treating this subject, mushrooms.

How may one cook them? In so many ways that one hesitates which particular one to advocate in looking over one's most cherished recipes.

They make delicious soups and savouries. They are excellent stewed, grilled, or devilled. They may be used in combination with eggs, and so many other valuable foodstuffs that their worth to us is rendered higher even than it would otherwise be.

Let us consider a few recipes then, and in each case, just to economise in space, imagine we have commenced with the injunction—"Wash, peel, stalk, and very carefully scrutinise the mushrooms." Here is a recipe for making a mushroom omelet: Chop enough mushrooms to fill two tablespoons, and fry them in butter, margarine, or bacon fat, till almost cooked, add salt, pepper, and a pinch of mixed herbs. Then add three or four eggs, and finish omelet as is ordinarily done.

A mushroom pudding may be made something after the style of the beefsteak one. As thus, make a crust with self-raising flour and butter, and line a pudding basin with it. Put in the mushrooms, pepper, salt, and a little water. Place the crust lid in position, tie down, plunge in a saucepan of boiling water and boil for an hour or longer, according to the size of the pudding. This is a good substitute for a meat dish.

Recipe for Stewed Mushrooms.—Melt a tablespoon of butter in a saucepan, add 1lb of mushrooms, pepper, and salt, and a squeeze of lemon juice; cover with lid, and cook very slowly for about 20 minutes or half an hour, stirring occasionally (with a silver spoon). Mix a dessertspoon of flour with a teacup of milk till quite smooth, pour the mixture into the saucepan, simmer for 8 or 10 minutes, and serve hot, and with a border of boiled rice, vermicelli, or macaroni.

Space will not permit of the giving of further recipes, but before passing from this subject Penelope must not forget to add that small baskets of mushrooms may be bought for 1s; while for 6d one can obtain a sufficient quantity of them to flavour a soup or stew, to make a sauce or omelet, or even to serve that savoury, "mushrooms and poached eggs."

The price of eggs has risen 4d in two days, rather an unexpected soaring. And in the face of our other marketing woes, a severe one.

Strawberries are 2s a basket; here and there 2s 6d; plantain bananas 2s, though they are also offering for 1s 6d; passionfruit 6d and 1s, and very fine navel organge 2½d each.

MILITARY WEDDING.

At St. Stephen's Church, Phillip-street, last evening the Rev. John Ferguson celebrated a marriage between Lieut.-Colonel A. E. Chapman, V.D., and Lily, youngest daughter of Mrs. John Taylor, Bellevue Hill. The bride, who was given away by her mother, wore a simple and graceful gown of white satin, the skirt, made walking length, was fully pleated at the hips, and the bodice was finished with Honiton lace. A necklet of pearls and a diamond brooch were her ornaments, and her bouquet was of small arum lilies; her tulle veil and sprig of orange blossom completed a girlish and effective toilette. The bridesmaid, Miss McCredie, was dressed in shell-pink Georgette, with a tunic bodice and a black aerophane picture hat, trimmed with gold tissue; she carried a pink bouquet. After the ceremony the bridegroom's brother-officers formed an arch of swords for the happy couple to pass under. The reception was held at the Australia.

In civilian life the bridegroom is an officer of the Crown Law Department, being a B.A. and LL.B. of the University of Sydney. He served in the South African war as captain with the Bushmen and Mounted Rifles, was commanding officer of the 24th Infantry (old 2nd A.I.R.), and at the outbreak of the war he acted as brigadier of the 6th Infantry Brigade during the absence of General Holmes at New Guinea. He later joined General Holmes's brigade for the A.I.F., and left in command of the 18th Battalion of the A.I.F. He saw service in Egypt and Gallipoli. He holds the officers' V.D. medal for 20 years' commissioned service, and the South African medal with several bars. The best man was Captain W. S. Hinton, of the Military Intelligence Department, Headquarters' Staff, who was Colonel Chapman's adjutant in the 18th Battalion, A.I.F., on Gallipoli. The arch of swords was formed by Major A. C. Mahs, V.D., and Major S. P. Goodsell, V.D. and Croix de Guerre (Posterres), Captains F. C. Stephens, J. F. Hughes, J. L. O'Donnell, V. E. Watkins, R. Partridge, W. J. Bradley, Lieuts. R. K. Howard, E. Samuels, S. B. Glass, T. Gannon, H. Burrows, R. H. Brown, J. F. Hegarty, and A. O. Andrews.

FROM NEAR AND FAR.

The half-yearly meeting of the 13th and 45th Battalions' Comforts Fund was held at the depot, Manning-chambers, on Monday. Mr. H. Y. Braddon presided. The hon. treasurer's report showed that the amount raised in the half-year ended June 30 was £1486/14/9. The balance was £786/18/11; of this amount £400 has since been cabled to Major Henley, to be spent in comforts for the two battalions. One thousand two hundred and thirty-six pairs of socks, 278 shirts, 215 Balaclavas have been sent through the War Chest during the half-year. The sum of £676/3/8 was realised to June 30 from the jumble stall at Paddy's Markets.

The Army Service Corp's Comforts Depot, 369 George-street, have just finished their Christmas packing, sending 1008 boxes to men of the A.S.C. in France, 300 to Anzac Mounted Division in Egypt, and 200 to motor transport men in France. At the monthly meeting on 7th inst it was decided to have the usual stall on Jack's Day, November 1, and on War Chest Day, November 29. Mr. Percy Herford is organising a concert in aid of No. 5 Mechanical Transport, to be held in St. James's Hall on September 2. Tickets are obtainable at Beale and Co.'s, George-street.

AUSTRALIAN GRASSES FOR JAPAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In to-day's issue of the "Sydney Morning Herald" it is reported that Japan is contemplating starting the wool industry, and that a large sum of money has been voted by the Diet to purchase sheep in other countries for distributing amongst the Japanese farmers. No doubt, many sheep will be purchased in Australia for shipping to Japan, and to ensure the acclimatisation of the animals it would be wise policy to export certain Australian grass seeds for sowing in Japan, so that when the animals arrived in that country they would be provided with some of their natural feed. Suitable species of grass are figured and described in my work on "Australian Grasses," published under the authority of the Government of New South Wales.

I am, etc.,

FINAL FLUTTER

SATURDAY NEXT 17th AUG.

A cup of hot Bonox is irresistible, especially during the bleakness of winter days and nights. The whole of the body shows its appreciation of the resulting warmth and good-feeling.

This is Nature's tribute to the splendid properties contained in which is not only delightful to the taste, but yields health and strength to the frame and tone to the nervous system.

BONOX
BODY BUILDING FLUID BEEF

Bonox is superior to any home-made beef tea—more economical, too.

The various elements of this body-building, pre-digested beef are specially balanced and blended for the purpose of building up the body and restoring wasted flesh tissues.

Try a cup on your arrival home tired, after work, and you will at once benefit by it. Splendid, taken in place of morning or afternoon tea, or for supper, with a few biscuits.

Add a teaspoonful when you are making gravies, stews or soups.

Obtainable from all grocers and chemists. Insist on Bonox—and get it.

Made in Australia—perfectly fresh and dependable.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 15, 1918.

LESSONS FROM THE VICTORY.

There is one indisputable lesson to be drawn from the reports of the great battle which we publish this morning. The more readily Australians enlist the quicker will the carnage and devastation of this war be brought to an end. At every stage of the campaign of this year the Australian soldiers have gained new honours. In the defence of the Ancre and of the Channel ports they presented an unbreakable front to the German assault. When their defence took the form of harassing the German line they proved themselves skilful and daring and efficient. The capture of Villers-Bretonneux and Hamel, which made the present attack possible, won the highest praise alike for the plan and its execution. In this battle, in which the greater part of the Australian army was engaged, they have seen some of the hardest of the fighting, and have won the most conspicuous success. They have carried everything before them in their advance, and have withstood a fierce counter-attack. It is clear that here, as elsewhere, they have done work which could not have been carried out as well by any but the finest regiments in the Allied armies. Their share in the Allied success has been of inestimable value, but its influence will not be limited either to this battle or to this war. It will always be quoted as an argument in defence of an ideal of life which ensures every citizen his personal dignity, his self-respect, and a fair standard of living. In fighting with the invincible pride of free men the Australian soldiers have done more for democracy than the most eloquent of its champions or the most obedient of its servants. But their example will be wasted, through no fault of their own, if they are not supported by their fellow citizens. This fighting, although the losses are said to have been very light, will have left many gaps in the ranks of an army already far below its strength. Positions cannot be lost and then recovered against the present German reserves without demanding a high price from the victor as well as from the vanquished; no army can continue to carry out tasks of this nature unless it is reinforced steadily. The Australian people have now to prove that their democracy can, not only fit its sons to pass the test of the battlefield, but does itself recognise its duty amid the surroundings of peace. Every country in Europe has paid a bitter penalty for allowing itself to be misled by the verbosity of politics and refusing to make the sacrifice of a preparation for war before making the heavy sacrifices of war itself. Great Britain and France have each redeemed themselves by exertions far beyond the anticipation of either their enemies or their friends. We alone

PROGRESS BY FRENCH

FIRMER HOLD AT LASSIGNY

ROYE AND NOYON THREATENED

The most important fighting on the West front has occurred south of Roye, where the French have increased their hold on the Lassigny Massif.

The French now practically dominate the Massif. If they advance any further the Germans must abandon Roye, Noyon, and considerable territory along the Oise.

There has been no notable change on the Australian, Canadian, and British fronts.

The Allies' captures, so far as they have been counted, include 28,000 prisoners, 600 guns, and thousands of machine-guns.

THE OFFICIAL REPORTS.

LONDON, Aug. 13.

Sir Douglas Haig in his noon report of to-day stated:—

We further improved our positions northward of Roye-road and on the north bank of the Somme, capturing additional prisoners.

We repulsed a local attack in the neighbourhood of Fouquescourt. Our patrols took a few prisoners southward of the Scarpe and in the neighbourhood of Vieux-Berquin.

We repulsed an attack in the Merris sector after sharp fighting.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting to-night at midnight, said:

The battle-front has been comparatively quiet, except for increased hostile artillery fire.

We took prisoners at different points.

Raiding and patrol activity is reported southward of the Scarpe, north-east of Robecq, and in the neighbourhood of Vieux-Berquin.

Since August 8 the French First Army and the British Fourth Army have captured over 28,000 prisoners, including 800 officers (of whom eight were regimental commanders), and they have also taken 600 guns (including many heavy guns), several thousand machine-guns, numerous trench mortars, three complete trains, and vast stocks of stores.

A French communique issued this afternoon states:—

No important event occurred during the night on the battle front.

Several enemy raids in the Vosges and Upper Alsace were made without results.

The French communique issued at midnight to night says:—

During the day we renewed our attacks between the Matz and the Oise.

Despite strong resistance, we made some progress in the northern portion of the Lassigny Massif, north-east of Gury. We gained a footing in Plessier-de-Roye Park, and reached Belval.

Further east, we carried our lines to a point ¼ mile north of the village of Cambronne, in the southern portion of the Massif.

GERMAN STATEMENT.

(Admiralty—per Wireless Press.)

A German communique says:—

We repulsed repeated attacks south of Merris.

We also repulsed attacks north of the Amiens-Roye road and south of the Avre.

THE RESTLESS AEROPLANES.

Sir Douglas Haig reported at midnight to-night:—

There has been much air-fighting. We brought down 30 machines and drove down seven out of control. We dropped 45 tons of bombs during the day, Peronne and Cambrai stations being heavily assailed. Twelve British machines are missing.

An American communique says:—

Our aviators successfully bombed enemy railroad yards at Longuyon, Dommary, Baroncourt, and Conflans. All returned.

The Air Ministry announces:—Our aeroplanes on the night of the 12th attacked an aerodrome and trains, anti-aircraft guns, and other targets with bombs and machine guns. All our machines returned.

They also attacked on Tuesday the Buhl aerodrome, and brought down one hostile machine afame. All our airmen returned.

The "Frunkfurter Zeitung" reports that several persons were killed in the streets of Frankfort during the raid on Sunday.

GENERAL SITUATION GOOD.

The following summary of the general position was issued on Tuesday night by the Australian Press Association:—

The French have captured Lenecouvillon, also the ground north of St. Claude Farm, putting them almost on the crest of the Lassigny Ridge. The enemy holds the ridges and the highest point of the extreme northern corner. It will take several days before the French are able to work down the slopes on the far side, also to get their artillery onto the crest. Then the enemy's communications with Roye will be under observed fire. The Germans, it is expected, will counter-attack in considerable strength in this sector.

The French capture of Les Loges is also important. They are now pressing close up on Roye from the west and south, and apparently hold all the high ground there.

The Germans are evacuating trenches in the bed of the Oise River, west of Batilly.

Later.

The French now occupy the whole of the crest of Lassigny Massif. It is considered inevitable that the German line northward of the ridge will fall back, and that Roye will become untenable. Its evacuation is expected within 48 hours.

The French guns have been brought up more quickly than was anticipated. Noyon will be under fire immediately.

Chaulnes may be held for a day or two longer, but its evacuation cannot long be postponed.

The battle continues violently over the whole of the 40 miles front between the Oise and the Ancre.

The maximum depth of the infantry penetration is 12 miles, and the average depth 9 or 10 miles.

The Crown Prince and Prince Rupprecht are draining their lines elsewhere in order to obtain reinforcements.

The British captured 400 guns and the French 250, while the British prisoners 20,000 and the French 10,500.

Later.

The French repulsed a counter-attack on the Massif after stubborn fighting. Although the French hold the crest, the Germans are still holding out on the north-eastern spur.

There is no news to-day concerning the French counter-attack on Les Loges Wood (south of Roye), from which they were driven last night.

Although the figures cabled represent the number of prisoners actually counted, the authorities do not actually regard the Paris estimate of 40,000 too optimistic.

The French captured 1600 machine guns, and the British an enormous number, but there has been no opportunity of counting them.

The enemy, apparently in preparation for a further retirement, is burning villages between Peronne and Chaulnes, but there are no signs of confusion and congestion behind his lines.

Since the beginning of July 75,000 German prisoners have been taken on the Western front.

ON THE AISNE FRONT.

There has been heavy local fighting on the Vesle at Fismette, north of Fismes. The Allies held positions on the north bank of the river, but heavy counter-attacks compelled them to retire to the south bank. They subsequently regained the ground.

The enemy is exhausting his reserves, drawing back his lines, and extending his divisions on the flanks. This process cannot be continued long.

BRITISH CAMOUFLAGE.

The correspondent of the "Morning Post" at headquarters reports that the German officer-prisoners admire the secrecy of the British preparations before the attack. It appears that the Germans expected increased shelling on the morning of the attack, but their suspicions went no further.

Very few people on the British side were in the secret. The troops which were being assembled knew nothing. Most artistic camouflage befogged the enemy command, which believed that the attack was coming in Flanders.

The secret assembling of tanks was an extraordinary success. They were brought long distances, and herded within view of German artillery observers, yet no suspicions were aroused until the, swarmed over the German lines.

"A PIAVE OF THEIR OWN."

Messages received in Ottawa from London state that the German internal situation is one of great depression. The Austrians are rather pleased that the Germans now have a Piave of their own.

WITH THE AUSTRALIANS.

(MR. GORDON GILMOUR, CORRESPONDENT OF THE AUSTRALIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.)

AUSTRALIAN FRONT, Sunday.

In operations of the present magnitude rapid changes in the situation may naturally be expected at various points. The Australians after two days of battle, during which they hotly pursued the enemy, on the third day found their grit and endurance put to a stern test. The German High Command threw in fresh reserve troops, with explicit instructions not to yield further on this northern flank of the great bulge which the Allied attack had so quickly made in their line—which, if permitted to grow, would compel a precipitate withdrawal on a large scale. Hence the Australians, in continuing their advance, were faced with a most stubborn enemy, fighting with the most grim determination, and asserting himself to the utmost to postpone further penetration.

The line chosen for this stand lies just west of the village of Lihons, including Crepy Wood, smaller woods, and some high ground in the immediate neighbourhood infested with machine-gun posts. Further loss of ground here threatens the German possession of territory northward to the Somme River. When the Australians went forward in conjunction with the Canadians on the right they had a warm reception. Machine-guns on the edges of the woods streamed bullets in thousands against the khaki lines. Advancing on perilously flat ground, and using every bit of cover available, the bravery of the Australians has never been seen in a finer moment. Numerous examples of splendid self-sacrifice occurred while small parties were creeping forward with noses upon the ground and jumping in and out of trenches with a view to taking machine-gun posts in rear, or bombing from the front.

The battle-tried Victorians again showed their worth. A few tanks were operating with the Canadians, who also met with violent resistance between Meharicourt and the Amiens-Chaulnes railway line, but succeeded in their advance, and established themselves at Chilly and beyond. The Australians had a protective barrage. The Germans, however, stood by their machine-guns to the death. The Victorians just north of the railway advanced magnificently, when they encountered a fierce blast of fire. After proceeding a few hundred yards they opened out and continued forward by short rushes, finally in extended skirmishing order, thereby offering a minimum target. They reached the woods and passed through them to the western outskirts of Lihons, which was heavily defended.

The battle swayed hereabouts all day. An Australian officer intercepted an enemy message to send reinforcements at once. "One regiment," the message stated, "is almost smashed, and we cannot hold on unless immediately assisted." There could not be a finer tribute to the doggedness and staying powers of the Australians. More Victorians attacked Crepy Wood, where the Germans used the opportune hours of darkness to place scores of machine-guns in the most favourable positions. These were kept so busy against the relentless attackers that they had not a moment for sniping against the Australian field-gunners, who had come up over the open to an incredibly short distance behind, and were blazing away furiously. Our artillery casualties were nil. The first officer taken prisoner offered an explanation of the hurricane defence measures. He said: "We were extremely anxious. We possess no defensive system behind that ridge."

The next feature of the day, which was full of severe fighting, was an attempted enemy counter-attack from behind Crepy Wood. At 6.30 p.m. they concentrated their guns for an hour upon the wood, and then sent forward 300 men. The only achievement was to cause a few Australian posts to be withdrawn. The Victorians refused to be ejected from Crepy Wood, where they maintained their line, 4000 yards ahead of their morning positions. They dug in to secure themselves against enfilading machine-gun fire from the north, where the line swings round. The enemy's concern for his safety was further proved by the heavy shelling of villages upon the flank, particularly Framerville. They also scattered gas on the Australian support areas without the slightest effect.

Every Australian unit was stimulated by the news of the success of the extensive French and Canadian operations. Every Australian private was speculating on the next move. Whatever the future brings, the present results are inspiring. We have not only entirely freed Amiens from the menace of shell-fire, but have already drawn here a number of reserve German divisions which were resting, presumably for Prince Rupprecht's much-advertised offensive. Moreover, the Australians, when once set going, are hard to stop. Their achievements up to the latest hour are self evident on the map, and their potential activities are equally great.

AUSTRALIAN FRONT, Tuesday.

The Australian line continues in a state of constant movement, but there is no longer a general advance. The activities of the past 48 hours have been chiefly with the object of straightening out the ragged parts of the line, and making the whole front German-proof. This has been effectually accomplished.

The assistance brought to the shattered German troops in their latest fight against the Australians, which the enemy obtained by throwing in fresh divisions, availed him little. The Australians, in their present humour, flushed with victory, and anxious to make it still more striking, are more than a match for the German Emperor's picked divisions.

The next developments in this great battle cannot be foretold.

The New South Wales, Victorian, and Tasmanian units made good in another strip of country on Monday, bringing Proyart into our hands, and also establishing posts some distance eastward of Rainecourt.

Nothing pleases the Australians better than striking the enemy where he likes it least. Proyart was a stronghold from whence German guns played into our positions, until the tide of the advance compelled their withdrawal to a safer distance, having thickly scattered nests of forlorn machine-gunners to stave off the attackers as best they could. But the Australians are now pastmasters in the art of stalking machine-guns, and have learned the knack of silencing them with a minimum of casualties.

Looking back over five days of fighting, which resulted in unprecedented territorial gains, and enormous captures of guns and ammunition, and a vast assortment of valuable material, one can say that the Australian losses have never been so small.

The troops speak enthusiastically of the romp they had on the first day. Undoubtedly the immensity of the attack, coming as a surprise, dislocated the German defensive schemes. But the Australians, from long experience on the West front, have acquired a facility for avoiding unnecessary losses. A great part of the secret is the advance without delay, giving the enemy no time to recover from the first shock.

Since August 8 the German resistance has been daily stiffening against the Australians, as elsewhere. It was a very necessary effort, otherwise the retreat was in danger of becoming so rapid as to be difficult to explain to the German people. If the latter could inspect the accumulation of guns which our King has just viewed on the Canadian and and Australian sectors, they would learn something of the truth about the latest phase of the war.

It has been inspiring to watch the Australians fighting and working, resting and playing in the past few days—but mostly fighting and working. The smartness of the movements of the artillery, galloping into positions close behind the advancing infantry, was a most impressive sight. Carrying parties were bringing up rations and ammunitions—all moving with uniform alacrity, knowing that upon their efficiency and co-operation depended the power of the brave boys ahead, face to face with the enemy.

A galloping limber, passing through a shattered village, overran and injured a weary war correspondent. There is such dust from the traffic behind the lines that it is frequently impossible to recognise horsemen and drivers. The red-haired and black-haired Australians soon become grey, while every face is a whitish, grime-covered, solemn spectre.

The latest gain of upwards of five miles along the course of the Somme River is among the best of the features of the operations from the Australians' viewpoint. Everywhere along the banks of the river thousands of soldiers may be seen swimming, especially in the hot hours of the day, while others are sun-bathing in the adjacent green marshlands. A burly Australian, floating motionless on his back, placidly watched a fierce anti-aircraft barrage against a passing German aeroplane.

Many artillerymen and others, whose units are in the rear, are wearing only white "shorts," disclosing sun-tanned skins which would arouse the envy of the most ardent surf-bather on the home beaches.

NEW TACTICS.

WHAT GERMANS ARE DOING.

The representative of the "New York Times" on the French front emphasises that the character of the fighting is undergoing a change. It is becoming an affair of manoeuvres rather than of frontal assaults or trench warfare. These tactics caused the fall of Montdidier, and are now threatening Roye and Lassigny.

Meanwhile the enemy is duplicating his retreat tactics of the Marne battle. He is desperately endeavouring to hold back the advance in order to permit the removal of guns and munitions.

Wonderful bombing work is being done by British airmen, who are demoralising the convoy system. An awful scene was presented on a bottle-neck road, where there is indescribable confusion—panic-stricken men, stampeding horses, and bomb-shattered vehicles. The British airmen also flew low, overtaking trains and firing in at the windows.

A CAVALRY FEAT.

The first detailed accounts of the cavalry's participation in the early stage of the battle state that the capture of Harbonnieres was a notably dashing feat. The village was strongly defended by machine guns, and direct attack was useless. Cavalry were ordered to make a wide detour, with a view to reaching Vauvillers, behind Harbonnieres. The plan succeeded, almost without a casualty, and Vauvillers was seized, with 700 prisoners. Harbonnieres was thus taken in the rear, and easily captured.

CREEPING OVER THE MASSIF.

With the resumption of the French advance on the Lassigny Massif, interest attaches to General Humbert's methods of attack. The French infantry have a particularly difficult task in reducing enemy resistance, which the land formation strongly assists.

The surface of the Massif consists of a jumble of ravines, affording excellent shelter for machine-guns and artillery. It is practically useless, but the capture of the Massif is so important, and may lead to such far-reaching results, that the difficult task is well worth the attempt.

General Humbert decided against frontal attacks against machine-guns. Therefore, each obstacle is being outflanked methodically on two sides, thus forcing a withdrawal.

So far the plan has worked well, and demands great courage as well as perseverance, but the French are displaying both qualities.

IRISH HOME RULE.

Mr. Dillon, M.P. (leader of the Irish Nationalists), speaking at Blackrock, Dublin, said that a Home Rule Act on the Statute Book would confer immense benefits. The Sinn Fein policy placed reliance on the Peace Conference. That was absurd and ridiculous, even if Germany won, but Germany was not going to win.

ALONG THE SOMME.

(COMMONWEALTH OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Aug. 13.

Yesterday morning the Australian infantry passed well beyond Lihons, walking through the actual town with the tanks. This stiff obstacle to the advance is apparently removed. The battle of Lihons will go down in Australian history as one of the hardest open fights within the experience of the force.

On the heights north of the Somme, yesterday morning, the Germans at Bray found other Australians looking down upon them. Queenslanders, South Australians, and some Western Australians during the night had taken a peninsula, on which stands the town of Etinhem, practically without loss. The Germans hurriedly blew up the railway bridge at Bray.

Although the Australians held the northern end of the peninsula, there were still Germans on the southern end. During the day Germans troops kept moving into Bray, and towards the end of the morning they managed to work their way along the edge of the peninsula. For two or three hours Germans were trickling on to the end of this spur, and gradually digging in across the slope. A line of men could be seen with the naked eye, each digging himself a little rifle pit across the green hillside. When these were established the German artillery laid down a heavy barrage upon the height held by the Queenslanders and South Australians, for half an hour. The ridge simply smoked with black fumes from shellbursts. Yet, through the whole of this turmoil the only movement one could see across the boiling hilltop was a line of four Australian stretcher-bearers winding their way quietly along some path across the summit. Every now and then rolling, thick fumes from some shellburst hid them completely from sight, yet when these cleared there they were still picking their way steadily across the plateau. On the right of where the Germans had dug in on the peninsula, actually behind our men, we could see three Australians apparently a patrol creeping on their hands and knees through the grass down the slope almost alongside the Germans. Then one of them coolly walked up the ridge to the top where he stood bending low for some moments calmly taking in the surroundings before he moved from the skyline in the direction of where our men clearly must then have been. It is obvious our flank had been slightly withdrawn in order to avoid the Germans behind it. The figure disappeared gradually over the skyline amongst the shell-bursts, which were still frequently spurting from that part of the slope. Presently the man reappeared, walked downhill, and rejoined his comrades. All of them filed off to carry information of the enemy's position back to those who were waiting for it.

Half an hour later upon those Germans, busily digging across the foot of the peninsula, there descended a crash of shells from the Australian Field Artillery. The Germans till then had been digging for dear life, working their shovels as hard as men could move their arms. Suddenly they dived for holes like rabbits as the first shell descended. For a quarter of an hour they were treated to the same experience which their field guns had been giving our men. When this was over we could still see them shelled from one gun barking at these Germans every few minutes. The observer for this battery was apparently not satisfied with the results, and determined to register his gun exactly on to the rifle pits. The first high explosive shell would spurt fumes from the very edge of these rifle pits; then alternately shrapnel burst wickedly low, and whipped up the dust freely over and around those pits. Unless the Germans had dug very much deeper than appeared, certainly some who had got in those rifle pits will never get out of them again. Later it turned out that the Germans, when they put down the barrage above mentioned, drove in an attack against the Queenslanders. This attack was completely beaten.

After dark last night the Australians south of the river advanced with complete success, and rounded off the Australian line. They captured 70 prisoners. So much for the fighting near Bray.

Near Lihons no sooner had the Australians taken the town than the Germans, who had put in a fresh division in the night, counter-attacked, and managed to penetrate nearly a mile. The Australians, after a struggle over country which was made difficult by the old Somme trenchlines and craterfield, within two and a half hours completely drove out the Germans and restored the line.

They also captured several 5-inch guns. In this struggle the Germans had the fresh 38th Division besides part of the 50th Bavarian Division, fighting against part of the same magnificent Australian division, which now, for three days, has been fighting this fierce battle for the heights at Lihons, which the Germans have been trying to hold on to as essential to their safe retirement. These two fresh German divisions had been put there especially to hold on to this hill, and both were beaten. Another fresh division was put in near Bray.

A number of prisoners were taken yesterday by the Australians in their fine advance near Rainecourt. The Germans captured by the Australians in this battle now number nearly 9000. The guns are not yet counted, but appear to number about 120. The depth of the Australian advance is now about 13 miles.

KING VISITS FRONT.

The King has returned to London from a visit to the front.

The King spent a strenuous week at the front, covering hundreds of miles. He left London on the 5th, and, though his visit was not connected with the prospective offensive, he saw much of the operations.

The King on Wednesday met President Poincare.

Several shells fell in the village street shortly after the King passed through, during his visit to the second army.

His Majesty visited the King of Belgium, Sir Douglas Haig, and Marshal Foch, and he decorated General Debeney with the order of K.C.B. He saw all the British army commanders, and inspected an enormous number of troops of all arms, and women's forces. He visited General Pershing, the American commander, and conferred on the Americans many decorations. He spent Monday with the Fourth British Army, and visited the hospitals and casualty clearing stations near the line.

The King visited an Australian aerodrome, and lunched with General Sir William Birdwood.

SPAIN AND GERMANY

STRAINED RELATIONS.

A diplomatic rupture between Spain and Germany is imminent.

GENERAL CABLE NEWS.

The Peking correspondent of the "New York Times" says that a contract for a gold loan of 80,000,000 yen from Japan to China has been signed. The Japanese Legation has denied knowledge of the matter, inferring that the transaction is unofficial. The terms of the loan are adversely criticised.

A Washington message says that an American Labour Mission, headed by Mr. Samuel Gompers, will visit Britain, France, and Italy during September, and confer with Labourites. Socialism will not be discussed, and will not be represented.

Sir Joseph Cook has received from Australia hundreds of messages congratulating him on his knighthood.

The British Ministry of Food is arranging to purchase 500,000 bushels of apples from Nova Scotia and Western Canada.

ALLIES AND RUSSIA.

RAPID DEVELOPMENTS.

ALARM IN GERMANY.

UKRAINIANS ATTACK TEUTONS

LONDON, Aug. 13.

It is reported from Amsterdam that an important conference on Russian affairs is being held at German headquarters, at which von Hintz (Foreign Minister), von Helfferich (Ambassador to Russia), are present. The "Berliner Tageblatt" demands the immediate summoning of the Reichstag to discuss questions affecting Russia, Finland, Ukraine, and Poland.

Reports from Moscow, received in Amsterdam via Berlin, state that the Entente has demanded, within three days, an explanation of Lenin's recent utterance that Russia would declare war against French and British Imperialism; and has also demanded the reason for the French military mission being forbidden to leave Moscow.

Cables received in Ottawa from London state that the Allies' campaign has opened successfully in Northern Russia. The population greeted the Allies enthusiastically, and the Bolsheviks scarcely offered resistance. Great quantities of rolling stock and many batteries were captured.

The Bolsheviks are doing their utmost to overwhelm the Czechs before Allied aid can reach them. The Bolsheviks have made an agreement with the Germans whereby the Germans will not advance, in order that the Bolsheviks may transfer forces against the Czechs.

The anti-Bolsheviks are growing in power. They have defeated the Bolsheviks in the Caspian region.

The Bolsheviks and Germans south of Archangel number 13,000.

REVOLUTION FEARED.

Advices to the American State Department from eye-witnesses in Ukraine say:—Bitterness among the peasants of Ukraine against the Germans is steadily increasing. German soldiers travel about the country in large squads, otherwise they are attacked by the peasants, who endeavour to capture them for torture or burial alive. The Ukrainian Government is reported to be training troops for the Ukraine army, and has approximately 80,000. Banks there are being reopened, and charge 12 per cent. commission on the withdrawals on old accounts. This results in large amounts of hoarded money being put in circulation.

Several thousand armed Ukrainian peasants are resisting German attempts to seize the harvests, and sanguinary engagements are proceeding. Fresh German troops have been ordered to Ukraine to suppress the beginning of a revolution.

Official circles in London are unable to confirm the reported flight of Lenin and Trotsky, and doubt the accuracy of the report.

The Amsterdam "Telegraaf" says that Germany has sent Landsturm troops from Flanders to Russia.

The "Vossische Zeitung" frankly admits that the Brest Litovsk Treaty is a dead letter, and that the situation is drifting towards a renewal of the war.

The Copenhagen "Politiken's" correspondent in Helsingfors states that the Germans intend to occupy Petrograd and are despatching troops.

BRITAIN AND CZECHO-SLOVAKS

The Press Bureau announces that the Government has issued a declaration that Britain regards the Czecho-Slovaks as an Allied nation, and recognises the three Czecho-Slovak armies as an Allied belligerent army, waging regular warfare against Austro-Hungary and Germany. Britain also recognises the right of the Czecho-Slovak National Council, as the present trustee of the future Czecho-Slovak Government, to exercise supreme authority over this army.

HUNS BUSY IN FINLAND.

It is reported from Copenhagen that there are great German and Finnish military preparations on the Norwegian frontier. Several thousands of men are making roads and laying down railways. The whole district is under German control.

TAX ON LUXURIES.

WHAT BRITAIN PROPOSES.

The select committee on the luxury tax has issued a report detailing its proposals.

Long schedules cover a vast number of commodities. Many are subjected to a tax irrespective of value, as, for example, precious stones and metals, silks, furs, perfumes, works of art, and things used for sport or amusement.

The second schedule covers meals, and board and lodging. Dinners costing above 5/ should be taxed, breakfasts above 2/, afternoon tea above 1/ daily, board and lodging above 17/6 daily, or 100/ weekly, single bedrooms above 45/ weekly, and double rooms above 75/ weekly.

Another list taxes men's boots costing above 40/, and women's shoes above 32/6, men's suits over eight guineas, and women's costumes over seven guineas, tobacco at 1/ per ounce, cigars at 9d each, horses over £150, and furniture suites over £50.

A minority report argues that the revenue-producing effect of the taxes will be defeated if the duty is chargeable on the whole amount, therefore it should be charged on the surplus over the exemption limit.

The committee recommends exemptions in favour of articles purchased by museums, libraries, and art galleries, and considers that scheduled prices should be capable of being raised to meet any rise in prices.

AMERICAN FIELD ARMY.

The correspondent of the "New York Times" on the West Front says it is officially announced that the organisation of the first American Field Army will consist of more than 300,000 men, embracing four or five army corps.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS.

It is announced in Washington that Germany has accepted the American proposal for a conference to discuss the treatment and exchange of prisoners. It will be held in Berne in September.

SHIPBUILDING.

Mr. Justice Higgins, President of the Commonwealth Arbitration Court, yesterday continued consideration of the reference by the Amalgamated Society of Engineers seeking restraint upon the Commonwealth Government from, under the shipbuilding agreement between the Prime Minister and the unions, imposing piecework, dilution, and continuity of operations on members of the organisation by individual or collective agreements.

After discussion, his Honor said he would create separate boards for New South Wales and Victoria, each side to nominate three representatives.

His Honor (to Mr. Hampson): In case I am against you in the matter of piecework, I want you to consider carefully whether you should not revise your position, in view of the efforts made by the Government to see that your interests are safeguarded, and that you are treated well. Will you undertake to go into that?

Mr. Hampson: We are quite amenable to reason, and if it can be established that piecework is essential to the quick building of ships we will have no hesitation in considering the position.

His Honor: All I want is your undertaking that you will go into this thing deliberately. I have no doubt about the men's desire to help in hurrying along the work, and believe that they are as anxious as any class of men for the welfare of the nation. I want you to consider the matter as if the country said to you, "The country claims your assistance, and you must get this work done." I want you to consider it as a gift to the country, and not as profit.

His Honor reserved his judgment.

TRANSPORT SUNK.

MISSING TOTAL 448.

LONDON, Aug. 14.

It is announced from Paris that the transport Djemnah (3716 tons, built in 1875) was torpedoed. The missing men total 448.

A submarine in the Mediterranean sank the Messageries liner Australien (6377 tons, built in 1880).

The Djemnah was sunk on July 14, and the Australien was torpedoed on the 19th, and foundered, after burning. Seventeen of the crew were killed and three passengers are missing. 848 were saved.

Both the Djemnah and the Australien were convoyed. Another ship was torpedoed with the Australien, but was not sunk.

AMELAND AFFAIR.

In connection with the British Admiralty statement regarding the attack on a British motor flotilla off the West Frisian coast, the German Admiralty alleges that the motor boats were accompanied by 25 warships of various descriptions, and that we were mine-laying extensively when the airship attacked us.

Sub-Lieutenant Cedric Outhwaite, a son of the member of the House of Commons, commanded a motor-boat which escaped from the Ameland. He is safe and unwounded in Holland.

A Copenhagen message says that a violent cannonade was heard in Skagen, coming from the direction of the Skagerrack, on Monday morning. Several vessels were seen travelling northwards at full speed.

ATTACKS ON SHIPS.

A British merchantman, which has arrived at an American Atlantic port, claims to have sunk a submarine off the coast after a brief battle.

It is reported from New York that a French transport of 3000 tons has been torpedoed in the Mediterranean.

WAR NOTES.

FRENCH PROGRESS BELOW LASSIGNY.

While the news from the Western front this morning shows no great alteration in the situation along the centre and left of the Allied attacking front between the Ancre and the Oise, the French on the right are making steady progress in their efforts to drive the enemy from the big wooded plateau between the Upper Matz and the Oise. The late French communique confirms the unofficial reports that the crest of the plateau has been reached, but does not suggest that the whole height is yet in the Allies' possession. The statement that l'Ecouvillon has been captured is not borne out by this official message. This small village is situated near the very centre of the massif, and close to the junction of the principal roads which cross it from the south-west and south-east. The French are, however, drawing tighter the loop which their line now forms on the western and southern sides of the position, where they now seem to have secured a fairly firm footing. On the south-eastern side they have forced their way up a gully, which carries the small Moutinet stream down from the plateau through Cambronne to the Oise. They are said to be two kilometres above this village, which should place them very close to the summit of the plateau on the southern side. This advance, combined with their turning movement on the western side of the height, seriously threatens the enemy's hold on the plateau. Their progress on the west has carried the French into the Plessier-de-Roye park, about a mile south of Lassigny, while the capture of Belval, over a mile and a half eastward of Gury, suggests that the French hold a fairly large slice of the western side of the plateau. It is possible, however, that the enemy has still to be cleared out of the big Thiescourt Wood, and that further heavy fighting will be experienced before he is finally driven from this stronghold on the left of his line between the Somme and the Oise.

POSITION OF ROYE AND CHAULNES.

Unofficial reports suggest that Roye and Chaulnes will shortly be in the possession of the Allies, and this surmise is apparently based upon the belief that the whole summit of the Lassigny Massif is now held by the Allies. It is, of course, impossible to say what step the enemy will decide to take in the near future, but the French held as much, if not more, of this plateau prior to the first Somme offensive as they now hold, and were almost as close to Roye on the south and west as they are now. The position at Chaulnes was almost exactly the same then as it is now, but the enemy continued to hold it. Unless the French are able to advance some considerable distance beyond the plateau the enemy is not likely to abandon either of these towns to the northward of it, although the Allies may secure possession of them by renewing their pressure on the centre. But, even should Roye and Chaulnes fall at the present time, their capture will not be nearly as important as it would have been in the early stages of the offensive. Had the Allies taken these centres on the second or third day the enemy's withdrawal from the southern side of his salient under the very heavy pressure exerted by the French on the right would have been a much more hazardous operation than it was. The loss of prisoners and material would have been much heavier, and the extent of the disorganisation in the enemy's ranks much greater. His stubborn defence of these centres will, therefore, have been justified even if he is forced to evacuate them later on.

THE ALLIES' CAPTURES.

Some official information regarding the number of prisoners taken since the commencement of the Anglo-French offensive on Thursday last are contained in Sir Douglas Haig's report published this morning. The total of 28,000 is not quite as large as those given in some of the unofficial messages, but it is nevertheless satisfactory. The presence amongst the prisoners of eight regimental commanders is due to the very rapid rate of progress achieved during the early stages of the attack. This fact is also emphasised by the statement that the guns captured numbered 600. The announcement contained in the Australian Press Association's message, that since the beginning of July the Allies have captured 75,000 prisoners, may not, therefore, be very much in excess of the actual total. While these figures fall short of the huge number claimed by the enemy this year, they must, combined with the casualties which he has suffered, have a considerable effect on his man-power. When he decided to launch his 1918 offensive he was prepared to sacrifice a certain number of men in order to achieve a decision. Mr. Hilaire Belloc stated that he was at first "budgeting for losses of 650,000 at the most," and that he lost 500,000 between March 21 and April 23. Whether this estimate was correct or not, it is perfectly clear that his losses have piled up considerably since then, as he has also launched his Marne offensive, his blow along the Noyon-Montdidier front, and his most costly effort on both sides of Reims. His earlier losses would have been justified had he attained his objectives, but he is now being forced to submit to further drains upon his man-power while being driven away from his objectives.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

A large gathering of Public school assistant teachers was held in the Protestant Hall last night. A motion was carried commending the Minister on his administration of the Education Department. A motion was also carried to the effect that the assistant teachers, experiencing as they did the failures of all Governments sufficiently to reward teachers for their services, considered the only remedy was to secure an amendment of the Arbitration Act so as to include teachers under its provisions. A committee was appointed to give effect to the resolution.

It was further decided that an application be made for permission for a delegation from the assistant teachers to be heard on the floor of the House when the estimates were under review. A request will also be made that the salaries be brought into line with the increased cost of living since the last regrading in 1911.

The British gained ground east and south of Meteren.

ENEMY THROWN INTO CONFUSION.

(COMMONWEALTH OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Aug. 13.

At 11.45 a.m. yesterday the Germans who had been thrown into confusion by the sharp attack of the Australian infantry south of the Somme during the previous night made a weaker effort to withstand our advance. The Australians in the night had cut off the village of Mericourt. The Germans in the old trenches there fought in some parts stiffly. Queensland infantry, however, bombed them out, killed about 150, and captured 230. Our advance carried the line past Cateaux Wood, but the Germans still held another large wood on the southern slope of the Somme, slightly ahead of the Australian line. During the day the Australian artillery crashed down on this wood. About the same time the German guns did the same. The Germans in the wood, being heavily shelled by both sides, ran. Meanwhile Victorian patrols further south had rushed a German post, capturing 20 men and three machine guns. This appeared to disorganise the German defence. Our troops easily captured Proyart, and advanced about a mile. We know now our advance on the first day rudely disturbed several German corps' divisional staffs. ..rmoured cars actually drove through, and some past, their headquarters, and shot down several officers.

Amongst the documents found was one informing the troops it was likely they had facing them the Third and Fourth Australian Divisions. I have not said the exact words, but the document read to this effect: "These troops are always attacking, and have the habit of capturing outposts and killing the garrison. They also frequently push ahead and establish posts forward." In a captured map all the Australian divisions on the Somme were specially marked as storm troops.

KING INSPECTS AUSTRALIANS.

According to a Paris message, during a review of the Australian Army Corps, his Majesty the King invested the Order of the K.C.B. on Lieut.-General Sir John Monash.

(COMMONWEALTH OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Aug. 12.

To-day the King visited the Australian Army Corps. After seeing the field of the great attack and the site of the famous counter-attack, Villers Bretonneux, the King visited the Australian headquarters, where 510 men, who mostly had come out straight from fighting, were drawn up, also a certain number of trophies. Five or six captured waggons with the captured horses, which were exceedingly ill-fed, were driven past the King, also a German motor ambulance. The King knighted Lieut.-General Sir John Monash, and thanked him, and through him the Australian troops, for the magnificent manner in which they had fought, and were still fighting for the cause of the Allies.

GERMAN TREATMENT OF PRISONERS.

The New York "Herald's" correspondent on the West front, interviewed two escaped British prisoners who reached the American lines. They said 4000 British prisoners and 1000 Russians were forced by the Germans to build a railway system south of the Aisne to below the Vesle. They also said the Germans had changed their signs, which hung everywhere, from "Gott strafe England" to "Gott strafe America."

Intelligent men told him that the Germans were using paper bandages in the hospitals, that the English and French bombers were creating panic and the greatest havoc in the Rhine country, and that the American wounded prisoners were inhumanely treated. The prisoners' daily rations were: Breakfast, a pint of coffee made from hawthorne berries; luncheon, vegetable soup of dried vegetables; supper, a pint of coffee, three-quarters of a pound of black bread; on which diet they were forced to work from daylight to dark.

BRITISH BOMB KARLSRUHE.

It is reported from Geneva that a British bomb, during the raid on Karlsruhe on Sunday, struck the arsenal, causing the great explosion. Other bombs seriously damaged the ducal palace and the railway station. There were eleven deaths.

AMERICA'S PROBLEMS.

The Washington correspondent of the New York "Times" says that the raids by U-boats on the American coast were discussed at length at a Cabinet meeting, and plans to more successfully combat the submarines were considered.

AMERICA AND CZECHO-SLOVAKS

The Washington correspondent of the New York "Times" telegraphs: The British Government's recognition of the Czecho-Slovaks as a nation and their armies as an Allied force waging war against the Central Powers is the forerunner of similar action by the United States.

AMERICAN STEAMER SUNK.

Submarines outside New York Harbour sank an oil tank steamer. Seven of the crew are missing.

RECRUITING.

Following up a total of 98 accepted men on Monday, 91 men were accepted on Tuesday—25 at the Central Recruiting Depot and 66 in the country.

Mr. Ross Gore, chairman of the State Recruiting Committee, who has been out of Sydney for some days, will resume his duties to-day.

The meeting at Martin-place yesterday was addressed by Recruiting-officer Wilson, Lieutenant Thomson, Corporal Hamilton, Private Seymour, and Private Barrington. Twenty-five men in khaki from the Central Recruiting Depot attended with the No. 2 District Guard Band.

At the Martin-place meeting at 1 p.m. tomorrow, Senator Thomas and Mr. Peter Bowling will speak. A band will be in attendance. At 8 p.m. in Martin-place Captain-chaplain Mackay will deliver a lecture on war subjects, illustrated by pictures.

The following meetings will be held to-day:—

Metropolitan Board of Water Supply and Sewerage.—12 to 1 p.m., and 1 to 2 p.m., Lieutenant Roddis, Private Eade, Miss R. S. Evans, Private Martin.

Perdrian Rubber Company, Ltd., Drummayne.—12 till 1 p.m., Sergeant Robson, Corporal Thrower, Corporal Stead.

Marchant and Co., Kent-street.—12.45 p.m., Lieutenant Wilson and staff.

St. John's Hall, Darlinghurst-road, Darlinghurst.—8 p.m., Mr. D. Levy, M.L.A. (chairman), Mr. Elliot Johnson, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Lieutenant Thomson, Senator Thomas, Warrant-officer Urquhart, Private Eade, and Mr. R. N. Caldwell. No. 2 District Guard Band will be in attendance.

On Tuesday, Recruiting-officer Wilson, Private Barrington, and Private Scrimshaw addressed the employees of W. D. and H. O. Wills. Forty minutes were allowed for the recruiting meeting. This firm, it was stated, is paying £13,000 per annum making up salaries to employees at the front, besides insuring each employee as he leaves for active service.

SPANISH INFLUENZA.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.

Spanish influenza caused four deaths on a Norwegian vessel which has been docked here. According to the of the Supreme Court, the Executive of the day might arm him with any, or all, of the powers contained in the Boorabil Act. That would enable a Commissioner to make a full inquiry on anything in regard to which he might be appointed. In justification of the urgency of the matter, Mr. Hall explained that it was desired that the principal witness, who was expected to return next Tuesday, should be taken straight to the Commission which they wanted to open on Monday.

OPPOSITION PROTESTS.

The leader of the Opposition (Mr. J. Storey) said he saw no special reason for the bill, because there could have been an inquiry before the Inspector-General of Police in the ordinary way as affecting members of the force. It was being said to-day that Scully never put his foot in San Francisco, and that the American Consul in this State had sent particulars of the case, his career, and so forth, to the New York authorities, who had stopped him from landing.

The Attorney-General: There is nothing in it.

Mr. Storey said the Government was not taking any risks with this I.W.W. inquiry. It wanted to find out just what other people knew of the I.W.W. case, and after it had elicited every atom of information from everybody concerned it would be able to determine whether or not it would appoint a further inquiry into the conviction of the men.

The Government wished his side to submit evidence to the Attorney-General or Solicitor-General when these very men might be implicated, said Mr. Storey. Was that a reasonable request to make? Some of the very men who were particular witnesses in securing the convictions against these men were saying to-day that they did not tell the whole truth, and if they had it was possible the trial might have had a very different ending. He therefore proposed the amendment which he had read earlier in the sitting, and which had been ruled out of order. His object in doing so was this: He and those with him were not quite certain whether a Judge sitting alone would take it upon himself to say that the men were innocent, or that a new trial ought to be granted, and they felt that if there were two members of the Opposition and two members of the Government side of the House, with a Supreme Court Judge as chairman, there would be a better likelihood of a proper decision being arrived at than if a Judge were sitting by himself.

JUDGE AND JURY ATTACKED.

Mr. Mutch hoped that the House would see that the scope of the commission was made as wide as possible. The most important point involved was not the allegations against the police—though that was an important matter—but the fact that 12 men were in gaol who might be there undeservedly. That alone was sufficient to show that the inquiry should have the very widest possible scope.

Mr. Fuller (Chief Secretary) You gave the Cabinet nothing at all. You were invited time after time to do so, but you would not.

Mr. Mutch: The majority of the men, at least, should not have been convicted. They were convicted by a jury drawn from the propertied classes—men who were obsessed, from the inflamed state of public feeling at the time, with a feeling of insecurity, and in these circumstances the men could not have a fair trial. Further, the Prime Minister, speaking at Ballarat on October 9, 1916—a month before the trials began—directly alleged that these men were absolutely guilty, and that speech was reported in Sydney. That circumstance contributed to raise prejudice against these men. Three days later, in Hobart, the Prime Minister produced letters which had been seized in a raid on the I.W.W. headquarters, and read them. How did he get them, if not by the connivance of the Government? The Judge who tried the case had presided at every case where working men were charged with sedition or something akin to it, and his class bias secured their convictions.

The Chairman: Order.

Mr. Mutch: The Judge swept aside evidence which tended to prove an alibi in the case of Macpherson, by saying there might have been a mistake in the date. In the case of Flynn, another piece of evidence which might have exculpated him was swept aside by the Judge. The Judge told the jury that they ought not to convict Beatty. But they did convict him, and the Judge who had told them that gave him 15 years. That was one of the matters that should be inquired into. Two years before this case—before any prejudice or passion had been raised against these men—Donald Grant went out to a job at Botany, and was forthwith dismissed, the manager stating that he was an agitator. The man who would not let Grant earn his bread at set on the jury that convicted him. Was it unreasonable to expect that that man could give a verdict without bias? They wanted that inquired into.

A Government supporter: Why did he not challenge this juror?

Mr. Mutch said he did not recognise him. The I.W.W. had been blamed for every fire that occurred at about that time, but immediately after the men were tried two young men set fire to a place, and said they had done so because the I.W.W. would be blamed for it. The I.W.W. would have been blamed for every fire that had since occurred had they been out of gaol. Some fires were framed up by the police themselves. Police were into newspaper offices and faked up reports about fires in the city in order to have the I.W.W. business going on. They admitted that they had faked up these fires. They wanted that inquired into. The public would not be satisfied unless the Government widened the Commission, because, although the charges against the police were grave, the question of the innocence or the gilt of the I.W.W. men was graver still.

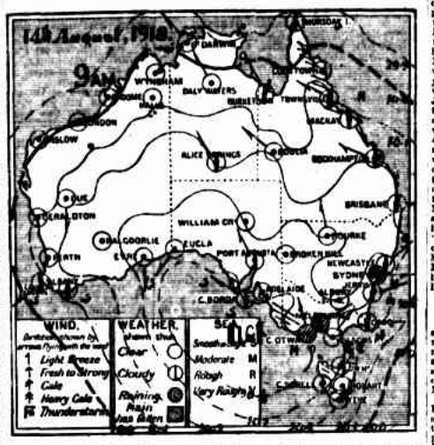
CHALLENGE TO PRODUCE EVIDENCE.

Mr. Ley: Why are you afraid to disclose the evidence in your possession?

Mr. Mutch said it was a matter to be disclosed before a commission, and not before the Government, which was politically interested. They were not politically interested. They were not politically interested. They were not

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



A gradual southward trend and slump in barometric values are again noted in the distribution of pressure over the Commonwealth. The central bulge of the "high" (30.6 inches) is situated over the central and eastern districts, and is an indication that atmospheric moisture is becoming a more important factor than static. Cloud is also gradually spreading. But, as opposed to those growing indications to rain, the high pressure influences still prevail, even though the centre is favorably situated for continuing with the present activity. Under the circumstances, it will be surprising if, by the end of the week, before any material diminution occurs, the light scattered showers are likely within that period, both in Queensland and New South Wales. In our view, present indications favor some sporadic showers in central and southern districts, including the coast; otherwise fine, with a strong tendency to fog in southern parts; also the likelihood of Bight frosts. Cloud should appear shortly in W and NW districts. The southward surge of the "high" has displaced the Antarctic disturbance further south-eastward, but its influence is still evident in the expressions both westward and south-eastward of Cape Leeuwin. Forecast: Freshening northerly around the Leeuwin; elsewhere smooth to moderate.

PRISON CHAPEL.

An interesting ceremony was performed at the State Penitentiary, Long Bay, yesterday afternoon, when the chapel, built by the prisoners for the use of all denominations, was opened by the Archbishop of Sydney, Dr. Wright.

The visitors included Mr. John Garland (Minister for Justice) and Mrs. Garland; Mr. D. R. Hall (Attorney-General) and Mrs. Hall; Mr. S. McCauley (Comptroller-General of Prisons) and Mrs. McCauley; Mr. James Mitchell (Inspector-General of Police) and Mrs. Mitchell; Messrs. W. J. Hanna (president of the Public Service Board); and B. H. Chapman (president Prisoners' Aid Association); and Messrs. Merrivale and J. E. Ducker, and Mesdames Edgeley, R. Robinson, Huxtable, and Morris, Misses Cox and Williams (members of the council of the P.A.A.); Dr. Lee Brown and Mrs. Brown, and a large number of clergy.

The Rev. T. Hillhouse Taylor conducted a service, and was assisted by Reverends A. J. Carter and H. Price. Archbishop Wright, who preached the sermon, pointed out that the building had been erected to establish thoughts of God, and he expressed the hope that its being would make those who worshipped in it realise the futility of trying to live without God.

TEMPORARY EMPLOYEES.

William Henry Austin, chief attendant at the Technological Museum, giving evidence yesterday before the Public Service Commissioner, urged that special attention be given to the matter of making temporary hands permanent. An officer who was employed at the Observatory and later on at the Technological Museum was for 22 years a temporary employee. He died while waiting for permanent rank. Sixty per cent. of the employees of the technical division of the Public Service were temporary in classification, although filling permanent positions.

Mr. W. H. Renwick, carpenter, employed by the Mines Department, said he knew of an officer who during 20 years' service received no recognition or reward, in spite of the fact that he had been commended in departmental reports and books. He died while awaiting a rise.

SHIRES ASSOCIATION.

The resolutions carried at the last annual conference of the Shires' Association of New South Wales were placed before the Minister for Local Government (Mr. Fitzgerald) yesterday, by a deputation.

Referring to the proposal to limit the power of the department to make surcharges to within 24 months," instead of "at any time," the Minister instanced the recent Waverley affair as one in which such a limitation would have precluded departmental action, and he stated that in no case did the department impose a surcharge where it was shown that unjustifiable hardship would be occasioned.

Councillor W. T. Misiejohann, referring to a resolution which protested strongly against the control of public watering places being handed over to pastures protection boards, said that shire councils were certainly the most competent bodies to control these areas, and had in many cases spent large sums of money on them. If deprived of them the councils should be compensated.

The Minister accepted a proposal that it be made compulsory for adjoining shires to destroy all noxious weeds within a mile from their boundaries instead of half a mile, as suggested.

Mr. Fitzgerald expressed himself as being strongly in favour of a proposal to set apart portion of the royalty levied on timber produced from reserves and other Crown lands for the use of shire councils.

PRICE OF TILES.

Mr. Val. Ackerman Deputy Prices Commissioner, held an inquiry yesterday into the prices of roofing tiles. Mr. Fuller, instructed by Messrs. Allen, Allen, and Hemsley, appeared for the manufacturers. Evidence was taken in camera from several makers as to the cost of manufacture and the prices charged, and the Commissioner agreed to visit the factories, at the request of the owners, before making any recommendation.

INTERNEE ESCAPES.

An internee named Anton Rosnovsky escaped from the German concentration camp between the hours of 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. yesterday. His description is as follows:—About 37 years of age, 6ft 1in high, dark hair, grey eyes and slight build.

POULTRY.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Subscriber.—Probably the cause is due to something that is being fed to the fowls. If you are feeding meat or blood meal, mouldy lumps may be the cause of the trouble. Meat that is tainted may also be a contributing cause.

"Belmore."—The best way to preserve eggs other than by cold storage, is by the use of water-glass (silicate of soda), which can be obtained from any storekeeper or chemist. The strength of the preserving mixture should be one part of waterglass to 20 of water. The water should be boiled, and while it is hot the waterglass should be mixed with it, but care should be taken that the water is quite cold before the eggs are placed in it. A kerosene tin will hold about two hundred eggs, and by filling the tin about one-third full with the solution, the eggs can be placed in it without overhot trouble. Only clean and fresh eggs should be packed, and each egg should be examined for cracks, as one cracked egg may spoil the whole lot. The eggs should be kept covered, and to keep them immersed there is nothing better than a piece of small meshed wire-netting cut to fit inside the tin. Earthenware or enamel vessels may be used, but not iron, or it will rust.

A.R. (Narellan).—At the N.A. College chickens are fed after the first 48 hours on rolled oats. This is followed by bran and pollard mixed with milk or soup for preference. Two-thirds to three-fourths of the day's feeding consists of this, and the balance of the chickens mixture. When six weeks old wheat and crushed maize can be substituted for the chicken mixture.

AMUSEMENTS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC MATINEE.

The first of a series of musical matinees under the direction of Mr. Oswald Anderson was successfully given at St. James's Hall yesterday by the Sydney Academy of Music and Dramatic Art. The introduction of new pieces for the stage being one of the aims of the management, a one-act play, "The Spirit of France," by R. A. Long, was put on, with the author as Lieutenant Jim Hardy, U.S.A. Secret Service, Mr. H. V. France as Francois, and Miss Joyce Hale as Suzette Vildon, a dancer. Suzette, whose mother had been deserted by Jim's father 20 years earlier, has planned an ingenious scheme of revenge with her young husband, who takes service with Jim as his valet. Soon he they lures him into a position, in which she discloses her parentage to the unarmed visitor, and Francois finally covers him with a revolver, and forces him to surrender important army papers. A band outside playing the "Marseillaise" raises the conspirators to a sense of patriotism, by which Jim profits, sending off Francois to staff headquarters with dummy papers, which he believes to be the originals. This development is fatal to the success of a drama's climax already imperfectly handled, and to make the hero of measures. The sketch was well-acted. Miss Hunt was dainty and French in her manner, the author was manly and easy, and the American with Francois was a managerial another new item was "Madeline at the Movies" (Leacock), a humorous recitation, admirably rendered by Montgomery Stuart. Mr. Arthur Summerhayes conducted the piano selection. Messrs. Wilks and Co.'s "Phone d'Amour," and solos by Mr. Warwick M'Kenzie and Mr. W. E. Lewis, with Lieut. Francis Blake as accompanist, were included.

MME. RAY JONES'S CONCERT.

A crowded audience greeted Mme Ray Jones with enthusiasm at St. James's Hall last night, after the ebb and flow of the past few days. Mme Ray Jones, or "Mlle Silenzia," to which she added with humorous accuracy the gipsy-song "Carmencita." Amongst the many students who assisted were Misses Ethel Hall (soprano), and Lottie Taylor and Ethel Peters (contraltos), and Muriel Dickinson and Vera Wright (mezzo-sopranos). During the course of the evening Mr. Arthur Rawlinson, announced that the artist whose singing had so charmed them that evening had generously offered to place at the disposal of the committee of the Red Cross purposes the Scarlet Follies. (Cheers.) Furthermore, Mme Ray Jones had secured influential patronage for the forthcoming concert, and had been given the right to work Operatic Society," and here again they would be indebted to her, and the young people who raised round her, for further help for comforts funds and similar worthy objects. (Applause.)

The Rev. C. H. Talbot (minister of the Randwick Presbyterian Church) paid a tribute to Miss Ray Jones's culture as an artist and success as a teacher, and presented her, as a mark of attention and esteem from her pupils, with a photographic cabinet. The latter also took occasion to present a purse in favour of the gallant boys who were standing between us and national destruction. (Cheers.) Our soldiers him a striking manifestation in the very interest of the present glorious advance, and all Australia was proud of them. (Enthusiasm.)

PALACE THEATRE EXTRA MATINEE.

In consequence of the rush for seats to see Guy Bates Post in "The Nigger," Messrs. J. and N. Tait announce a matinee for to-morrow as well as Saturday.

MADAME JENSEN'S STUDENTS.

The senior students of Madame Jensen's Academy of Music gave their second annual fancy dress masquerade ball on Thursday last in the I.O.O.F. Temple. Amongst the many fine costumes displayed, the prizes during an enjoyable evening fell to Clyde Owen, Miss Corean, Miss Finlayson, and Mr. Meakan. A flashlight was taken during the promenade.

FOR THE SOLDIERS' WELCOME FUND.

At the Conservatorium of Music on Saturday evening next the students of Mr. Nelson Illingworth will give a grand opera recital in aid of the Soldiers' Welcome Fund. This will be the last opportunity of hearing these students in the beautiful music of their costume scenes, the plans for which are at Nicholson's.
